Abstract

The investigation was undertaken to determine the level of students satisfaction on food services and environment. The 183 randomly selected grade 11, grade 12 and college students were the respondents of the study. Questionnaires made by the researchers were used as instrument in this study to gather the needed data. The data gathered were subjected to descriptive statistics such as mean, Slovin's formula, T-test and one way Anova. The study revealed that the respondents were satisfied on the food services and environment of the school canteen.
